

Rosalie Barili is a mother, grandmother, great-grandmother, and family historian. With over 35 years in editing and technical document management in medical, scientific, and engineering fields, she has also spent decades serving her community – supporting churches, schools, homeless programs, food and clothing centers and even cofounding a small library.